HONOR AMONG THIEVES

Controversy Surrounding New York's Tenant Advocate Director

A recent report by the UK Daily Mail highlighted a confrontation involving Cea Weaver, the newly appointed Tenant Advocate Director for New York City Mayor Zohran Mamdani. Weaver, a Bryn Mawr graduate known for her anti-capitalist and anti-white supremacy rhetoric, was questioned by journalists regarding her family's property holdings. In 2018, Weaver famously claimed there is no such thing as a "good gentrifier," yet investigators discovered her parents own a 1.4 million dollar home in a formerly black Nashville neighborhood that has become unaffordable for the lower and middle class.

Despite Weaver's public stance that homeownership is "racist," she resides in a gentrifying area of Crown Heights, New York. While critics point to these discrepancies as evidence of hypocrisy, New York Magazine defended Weaver, suggesting that if the Mayor remains supportive, the news cycle will eventually move on.

The Minneapolis ICE Shooting and Media Narrative

A recent shooting involving Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) in Minneapolis has drawn significant media attention. The incident resulted in the death of 37-year-old Renee Nicole Good, who has been identified as a trained activist with "ICE Watch," a group dedicated to interfering with federal immigration agents.

Emerging details suggest complications for the standard narrative:

- Good's wife was reportedly filmed expressing guilt for bringing Renee to the scene to confront agents.
- ICE Watch has recently encouraged members to use items like burning trees to barricade streets.
- DHS statistics indicate a 3,200 percent spike in car attacks against ICE agents over the last year.
- The agent involved in the shooting had been previously injured in a car attack in Minneapolis where he was dragged 100 yards.

Some analysts suggest the heavy media focus on this event is intended to shift public attention away from ongoing investigations into widespread welfare fraud in Minnesota.

Corporate Accountability: Hilton De-Flags Minnesota Property

Hilton Hotels International recently took decisive action against a Hampton Inn franchise in Lakeville, Minnesota, following allegations of discrimination against federal agents. The hotel had reportedly canceled government-booked rooms and informed officers in writing that they were not allowed to stay at the property.

The situation escalated when independent journalist Nick Sortor released a video showing a front-desk worker still refusing service to agents after corporate headquarters had claimed the issue was resolved. In an unusually swift move, Hilton severed ties with the property in less than 24 hours, ordering the removal of its trademarked signage. This action serves as a warning to other franchisees regarding the requirements for equal treatment and public accommodation.

National Crackdown on Welfare Fraud

Vice President JD Vance has announced the creation of a new Assistant Attorney General position dedicated to rooting out welfare fraud nationwide. This role will be unique as it will be based within the White House rather than the Department of Justice, reporting directly to the President and Vice President.

The initial focus will be on rampant fraud in Minnesota, with the Vice President explicitly calling for the resignation of Governor Tim Walz due to alleged mismanagement and participation in fraudulent activities. Additionally, the Trump administration has frozen over 10 billion dollars in federal social services funds for five states—California, Colorado, Illinois, Minnesota, and New York—pending further investigation into misuse. The scope of this new fraud apparatus may also extend to investigating NGOs that fund public-order disturbances.

Initiatives to Address Housing Affordability

The administration is moving to address the housing crisis through a combination of financial interventions and regulatory changes. President Trump has instructed Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac to utilize approximately 200 billion dollars in reserves to purchase mortgage bonds. Experts estimate this could lower 30-year mortgage rates by 0.25 to 0.5 percentage points, potentially pushing rates into the 5 percent range and stimulating market activity.

Complementing this move is a new ban on hedge funds purchasing residential properties. By preventing large investment portfolios from acquiring starter homes, the administration aims to increase the available supply for individual buyers and lower overall prices.

Legal Battle Over mRNA Technology: Monsanto vs. Pfizer and Moderna

In a significant legal development, Monsanto—a subsidiary of Bayer—has filed lawsuits against Pfizer, BioNTech, Moderna, and Johnson & Johnson. The litigation alleges that these pharmaceutical companies infringed on Monsanto's 1980s patents related to stabilizing messenger RNA (mRNA).

Key points of the legal dispute include:

- Monsanto originally developed this technology to create durable, pest-resistant proteins in genetically modified crops.
- The lawsuit claims the same "codon-optimization" techniques used in Roundup Ready seeds were repurposed to stabilize the mRNA in COVID-19 vaccines.
- Potential damages could range from 6 to 10 billion dollars, based on standard biotech royalty rates applied to the 100 billion dollars in global revenue generated by the vaccines.

This litigation highlights the unexpected intersection between agricultural biotechnology and human pharmaceuticals, as the "thieves" of intellectual property now face off in court over the profits of the mRNA revolution.
